

This year's election seems to have stirred up more than controversy. The number of hate crimes in the U.S. Has spiked by 20% since this recent election. Among this is the rise of the alt-right, a terrifying and heartbreaking reality. They claim freedom of speech, but shouldn't there be a limit if they are inciting violent acts? The events that took place in Charlottesville were a harsh reminder of the true intentions this dangerous group has. In recent news

- hate speech
- alt-right
 - silicon valley/google
 - past and present(Charlottesville/Trump era)
 - caroline sinder
- distributive websites
- arguments
 - free speech
- possibilities/consequences
 - how it will affect us in the future
 - what does this mean for us?
 - what if the alt-right ACTUALLY built their own internet

In the age of technology, how did the rise of the alt-right come into play and what are the implications for our future.

- Internet allowed multiple platforms for the alt-right to come together (anonymous if they felt the need)
 - 4chan, reddit, daily stormer, alternative right, breitbart news
- Trump's election allowed the alt-right to push their agenda/message/ideologies

Thesis: